

State Socialism in Actually Existing Capitalism

The Chilean Response to the Great Depression (1932)

2nd Edition

Contents

Introduction to the 2nd Edition

Introduction

Chapter I

The Antecedents: Conflicts, Reforms, Crises

Economic and social structures, the political aspirations of middle class groups; political and economic conflicts; military reformers in 1924-1925; the constitution of 1925; conflicts and reforms under authoritarian governments; the Great Depression; the economic and political crisis.

Chapter II

Chronology of the Socialist Republic: People and Events

Chapter III

State Socialism: Inspirations and Ideas

“Plan Dávila”; Dávila’s inspirations; “Plan Lagarrigue”; Lagarrigue’s inspirations; Proclamation by the Revolutionary General Staff; the Junta’s first pronouncement; the “Thirty Points” of the Nueva Acción Pública; a declaration by a member of the Junta; a circular letter in the Ministry of Defence; programmatic declarations of the revolutionary leaders; first decrees get mentioned; programmatic declarations after the ousting of Grove and Matte; more decrees get mentioned; other declarations; concluding remarks.

Chapter IV

Economic Policy: Decrees and Credits

Export policy; import policy; regulation of the manufacturing industry; steering the production of and trading in basic commodities; stimulating production; customs and tax policies; civil law provisions and credit in the domestic market; foreign exchange policy; monetary policy; concluding remarks.

Chapter V

International Conditions: Market and Military–Political Power

Foreign trade and foreign assets in Chile; markets for copper and nitrates not under government controls; diplomatic interventions and getting the gold back; foreign activities and the fiasco of the foreign exchange deposits policy; tackling the foreign monopoly on petroleum supply and the foreign withholding of the supply; British, US, and German diplomacy, and the military intervention problem; the decree on the General Commissariat, and foreign objections; foreign diplomats vis-à-vis communism as a criterion; the USA and its conditions for diplomatic recognition; the United Kingdom and its conditions for diplomatic recognition; Germany and its conditions for diplomatic recognition; businesspeople and US, UK and German diplomats; concluding remarks.

Chapter VI

Public Opinion: Frustrations and Expectations

Political agitation; communists; the Catholic Church; big landowners; “white guard” activities; “the strike of the crossed arms”; socialist organisations; other parties and organisations; trade unions; civil servants’, engineers’, bankers’, and medical doctors’ associations; women; students; Supreme Court judges; military officers; Santiago press; reactions to the ousting of Grove and Matte; one perception of socialism; censorship; industrialists; conservatives’ conferences; fascists; the parliamentary system as a topic for debate; Acción Revolucionaria Socialista; socialist organisations before the electoral campaign; agricultural workers and los Mapuches; the “responsible” politicians; concluding remarks.

Chapter VII

Conclusion: Crisis, State Socialism, Capitalism

Assertive economic policy; redistributive functions; new laws; the rule of law in foreign relations; the political mobilisation of middle class groups; economic nationalism; socialism in capitalism.

This book was completed in 1989, and published in its first edition in Warsaw, 1996.

Professor Ryszard Stemplowski, LL.M, PhD (history), D.Habil.(history) - Professor of Political Theory and Philosophy, Akademia Ignatianum in Kraków (since 2010), Emeritus Professor of International Studies, Jagiellonian University, Kraków. Research fellow of the Institute of History, Polish Academy of Sciences, Warsaw (1974–1989); Visiting Fellow at St. Antony's, Oxford (1974), he was recipient of a postdoctoral research grant of the Robert Bosch-Stiftung (1980–1981) and of the Alexander von Humboldt-Stiftung Fellowship (Universität zu Köln, 1981–1982), and served as Szef Kancelarii Sejmu (Secretary General of the Chamber of Deputies, 1990–1993), Ambassador to London (1994–1999), and [the first] Director of the [new] Polish Institute of International Affairs (1999–2004).